“Oh Be Careful Little Mouth”

One of the great things about living in south Georgia is our football. From Pee Wee, Vikings and Cats to the VSU Blazers, we have some of the best football in the country. I mean you don't get the name "Title Town USA" for nothing! Every once and a while my mother-in-law, who has season tickets, is tied up on a friday night and I, being the favorite son-in-law, get her beloved tickets and even her parking pass. I must guard the parking pass with my life. To lose it means no Sunday dinners for 4 months. The last game I was privileged to attend, I happened to be sitting just in front of a couple of guys that were pretty obnoxious. I really didn't know any of the players from either team, but at least I was sitting on the winning teams side. Even winning by a hefty margin the guys behind me kept the game at least in their mind as important as a 2 point game with only seconds to play. I filmed high school football for about 7 years and during my time as a cinematographer I became pretty proficient at guessing the plays Coach Nic Hyder might call. I really had to plan ahead and keep the ball in the frame or hear the wrath of the assistant coaching staff.

So as I sat in front of these two former players I suppose it became very apparent that they missed their calling, they needed to be the coach. And for the better part of 3 quarters I had to listen to them predict the run plays and when they should pass. Of course the current coach was not connected to these guys by head set because they were almost always wrong, or the coach was, it kind of got confusing. They berated the coach and players even calling them out by name a few times, and I was just hoping no family member was in hearing distance. They were down right ugly, and I could not help but wonder what a parent must be thinking while this was going on.

The scene reminds me of far to often what I see people sometimes do in the church. The people that supposedly are for the same team and even bear the image of Christ can be so cruel. I think of people who say cruel things to other members, and who might tear down those who are trying to help others. Maybe they tell the song leader he led too many songs. I think about when someone gets on to a young couple about "taking care of their child" like they should, failing to understand the effort they went to just to make it to services. I think about when we might say something ugly to a visitor about their dress and fail to realize it's the best they have. I think about how some Christians are convinced that gossiping about others is a "spiritual gift" and it's their duty to tell others. I think about Christians that make cruel statements to their spouses that they would never make to others. I thought about the hurtful words that have been spoken by those who are commanded to let their lights shine before others. "Let your speech always be gracious, seasoned with salt, so that you may know how you ought to answer each person" (Col. 4:6) "Let no corrupting talk come out of your mouths, but only such as is good for building up, as fits the occasion, that it may give grace to those who hear" (Eph. 4:29)
